Admission.

THE Term commences punctually on the Second Thursday of October in each year, and continues until the second Wednesday of the ensuing May. The week from December 24th, to January 2d, both days inclusive, is vacation. During the remainder of the year, or recess, a course of study is prescribed for the Junior Class, and for such of the Senior Class as shall pursue the post graduate course. Candidates for graduation must register their names with the Dean of the Faculty, before the close of the first week in November, and must be in daily attendance on the exercises of the College thereafter.

Students may enter subsequently to the close of the first week in November, on payment of a proportionate part of the fees, but they cannot be graduated. Those who desire to attend the Lectures of one or more of the Professors, without attending the full course, can do so. The fees in that case will be reduced as may be agreed. This plan is not recommended, because it necessarily omits important topics.

Candidates for admission will register their names, and pay their fees to the Dean, at the College, on the two days next before the commencement of the term.

No particular course of previous study, either academical or legal, nor any examination, license to practice, or certificate of age, is required for admission to the Junior Class. For admission to the Senior Class, a satisfactory examination in the course prescribed for the Junior Class, or its equivalent, will be required. The regular examination for this purpose will be held during the first three days of each term. The certificate of an attorney at law, in good standing, showing that the applicant has diligently studied law, for one year previous, under his tuition, will also be required from those who have not taken the first year's course in this school.

Expenses.

The tuition fee, for the first term which the student attends, is sixty dollars, in advance: for the second term, thirty dollars, in advance. The fees are to be paid on registering the name. An additional fee of five dollars is charged as a graduation fee, to all who take a degree. The College makes no other charges, nor is there any other expense, by law or custom, imposed on the student.

The text books cost, in Cincinnati, about forty dollars; in some years, a trifle less; in some a trifle more. The other expenses vary, according to the habits or mode of life of each student. The following is an approximate statement. The lower figures do not, of course, afford luxury.

Rent and care of room, $2.00 to $4.00 per week	$52.00	$104.00
Board, $3.25 to $6.00	84.50	156.00
Fuel and Lights	10.00	20.00
	$146.50	$280.00

Course of Study.

The organization of the School has been changed by dividing it into two classes, Junior and Senior; each having the separate course of study and text books designated for it, which follow:

JUNIOR YEAR—Institutes and Elementary Law; Contracts; Mercantile Law; and law of Real Property. The text books are Blackstone's Commentaries, Vols, 1, 2, and 3; Kent's Commentaries; Smith on Contracts; Smith's Mercantile Law.

SENIOR YEAR.—Pleading and Civil Procedure; Evidence; Equity Jurisprudence; Torts; Law of Real Property; Criminal Law; Wills and Administration. The text books are Stephen on Pleading; the Code of Civil Procedure; Greenleaf on Evidence; Smith's Manual of Equity; Addison on Torts; Williams on Real Property; Bishop on Criminal Law; Redfield on Wills.

POST GRADUATE YEAR.—A third years' course will be added whenever a class of sufficient number can be organized, and communications on this subject are invited. It will be open to Graduates of this or other Law Schools, and the course will consist of the higher branches of the Law Merchant, Equity Jurisprudence, Admiralty Law, the Law of Corporations and Conflict of Laws.

No special instruction is given in the legislation of any State, but the statutes of Ohio are referred to, when they change the rules of the common law, or the ordinary doctrines of equity.

On the first four days of the term, the Professors will give an outline of the course of study. The lectures will commence on the first Monday of the term, and thereafter the classes will be regularly and daily examined upon the reading prescribed, and upon the Lectures. The student is expected to read, after the Lecture, in the books or cases which the Lecturer directs, and to be ready, by the next examination, to apply his knowledge to any hypothetical case the examiner may put to him. His attainments are thus put to an immediate trial, and his misapprehensions and difficulties removed before they have had time to become real impediments. At the close of each lecture or examination, the students are expected to ask any questions of the Professor that may occur to them, in connection with the topics discussed.

The regular course of study occupies a period of nineteen months, including two terms of seven months each, and a recess of five months between the terms. The topics are so divided that students may enter the College in either year; and by attending two terms have the advantage of the whole course; or, upon being prepared to pass a satisfactory examination on the topics of the junior year, may enter the senior class, as candidates for graduation, at the close of the term at which they enter. Students who have not had the advantage of systematic instruction and examination in a law office, are in general inadequately prepared to enter the senior class. Where the additional expense is not a controlling consideration, that course is not recommended, and none will be admitted as candidates for graduation, after the first week in November, in any case.

Students who have not pursued any preparatory studies, and whose means do not allow them to attend two years, frequently desire the advice of the Faculty as to the most profitable time to attend the College; at the begining of their studies; or after they have had a year or two of preparation. If the student is under age, has had the advantage of a collegiate training, is residing where courts are held, and is in the office of a practicing lawyer who directs his studies and examines him in his reading from week to week, it will probably be the wiser plan to pursue there, the preparatory studies prescribed. If he has no one to direct his first studies and remove the impediments which all beginners in law studies must encounter, it is more advisable to enter the College for the sake of getting a definite outline of a course of education. Much more time and labor will be lost in beginning and continuing his studies without the guidance indicated above, than will compensate for this drawback. Students who attend two terms in the Law School, are in general found to be incomparably better prepared than those who have only attended at the close of their preparatory studies.

Julius Dexter, Esq., one of the Trustees of the College, has provided funds for the following Prizes, to be awarded to the graduating Class at the close of the term:

Two prizes of seventy-five dollars each to those who shall pass the best oral examination; and a prize of seventy-five dollars for the best essay on "the relations of law and equity, and the province of each."

An additional prize of twenty-five dollars will be given either for the best examination, or the best essay, as the Committee shall determine.

The awards are to be made by the Committee of the Bar, appointed by the District Court to examine candidates for admission to the Bar.

Libraries.

A LIBRARY of over fourteen hundred volumes, of the best writers on law and jurisprudence, and the more important reports, is connected with the school. It has been selected with special reference to the wants of the school, and is devoted to its exclusive use. Large additions will be made to it annually, a yearly appropriation of $1500 for that purpose being provided by the Corporation, and it is open to the students daily from 9 o'clock A. M., to 10 o'clock P. M.

Students of the Senior Class will also have access, without charge, to the Law Library of the Cincinnati Bar. Those who do not attend the full course of all the Professors, will be charged three dollars each for a certificate of admission to the Library. This library, which is one of the largest and best in the country, having been selected with a view to the actual demands of practice, is particularly well adapted to the wants of advanced students about to come to the Bar.

It contains all the American, English, Irish, Canadian, and Nova Scotian Reports, and a large collection of American and English Statutes, besides the standard text books. Considerable additions are annually made to it, as new works are published.

By the rules of the University of Cincinnati, students in this school may take special studies in the University, free of charge, if found, on examination, qualified to enter such classes.

Students who are non-residents, are by the courtesy of the Directors of the Young Men's Mercantile Library Association, admitted to their Reading Rooms without charge.

Moot Courts,

Will be held each week, except during the first few weeks of the session.

Degrees.

CANDIDATES for graduation are required either to have attended the full course of lectures of all the Professors, at two terms in this College; or to have attended at one term, and to have studied a year previous to entering upon the term at which they offer themselves for graduation, and must be prepared for an examination on all the studies prescribed for the preceding year, or studies of equivalent works. Gentlemen who have attended the terms of other Law Colleges, or who have been admitted to the Bar, upon examination, are put upon the same footing as to examination for degrees, as those who have attended one term at this. Students thus qualified, and whose attendance and conduct has been unexceptionable, will be examined, in writing, by the Faculty at the close of the term. If the examination is satisfactory, they will be presented to the committee appointed by the District Court of Hamilton County for final examination, as candidates for the Bar. If that committee report them qualified for practice, the Corporation will confer the degree of Bachelor of Laws upon them, and those who are residents of this State, will be immediately admitted to the Bar. No one who has matriculated after the close of the first week in November, or who has not been regular in his attendance, or who has been rejected by the committee, can be graduated. This examination is a real one, and no degrees are granted by this College without it. Graduates must attend in person to receive their degrees, which are conferred on the last day of the term.

The law of Ohio, April 7, 156, 1 Swan & Critchfield, 94, provides that graduates of Law Colleges in Ohio, having the other legal qualifications, as to age, citizenship, residence, and character, are to be admitted to practice law, without the probation of two years' study required by the law of 1824.

Very valuable advantages are thus open to those who have time for pursuing any branch of literature, or scientific culture, in connection with the study of the law.

Advisory.

In reply to inquiries so frequently made of Members of the Faculty, as to the expediency of attending law lectures, and the amount of reading required to graduate at this College, the following suggestions are made.

Questions of this kind, depending as they do on an intimate knowledge of the student's natural abilities, his previous training and habits of study, and the advantages he may have been able to command at home in the furtherance of his studies, are not easily answered. It can only be suggested that if the student is in the office of a competent instructor, who directs what he shall read; who stimulates his industry, and quickens his perceptions by thorough examinations; who is ready to explain all his difficulties; who requires him intelligently to prepare all the steps of an actual litigation; if he has access to a well selected library, and is told how he can advantageously use it; if he has opportunities of seeing how the legal business of a large commercial city is carried on in the Courts; a Law School will have few, if any, advantages, to offer him. To those who can not command such advantages, it is conceived that a Law School offers many and great advantages. Lectures, diligent study of the text and a sharp examination, quicken the perceptions; give force and momentum to the thinking faculties; keep the attention alive, both in reading and in hearing; afford immediate scope for practical applications; and produce deeper and more accurate impressions than solitary reading.

The daily misapprehensions which students fall into by misapplying isolated passages in the text-books, must be immediately dissipated when a competent lecturer explains or examines upon the subject. To be trained to the habit of accurate listening, is invaluable to an advocate, one of the chief duties of whose life is to examine witnesses, and report their disjointed stories immediately and accurately to the jury, and merely listening to the questions and mistakes of others, is instructive. Great advantage, too, is believed to be derived from the location of such schools in large cities, where the practical workings of the Courts can be witnessed by the student, and the constant instruction of practicing lawyers can be secured.

It is impossible to answer the question as to graduation. Students reading alone, or in offices, where they are seldom examined, have so little opportunity of measuring their real attainments, that they often mistake the time spent in reading, or the number of volumes read, for a knowledge of law. No rule of law is learned until the student can put it into practice. The students of the Law School are, for example, constantly examined by the facts of the case being stated to them, and an immediate decision required, with the reasons for it, and a reference to the passage of the text-book on which they rely; and they bring their books to the lecture room for that purpose. The only true theory of a legal education, the lecturer assumes, is that which involves a practical training for the duties of the profession, by the learner being taught to put into actual use the doctrines of law in their application to the usual transactions of business.

The test required upon the final examination is fitness, intellectually, for admission to the Bar; and the Committees appointed by the Court to conduct the examination, are not disposed to lower the standard. A student of fair abilities and education, who has devoted the required time to serious study in the books above indicated, understanding what he reads, before attending the lectures, ought to be able to graduate. Whether he can, depends on himself.

☞Communications concerning the Law School should be addressed to RUFUS KING, Dean, No. 82 West Third street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Lecture Room and Library are in the Cincinnati College Building, Walnut street, between Fourth and Fifth streets.

CATALOGUE OF THE

PROFESSORS AND STUDENTS,

OF THE

Law School of the Cincinnati College.

A. D., 1833--1877.

This School was founded in May, 1833, by lawyers who had received their instruction in the Law School of Reeve & Gould, at Litchfield, or in the Dane Law School at Cambridge, and who sought to introduce the advantages of that method of the study of law into the West. It is understood to be the first Law School established west of the Allegheny Mountains. The first term began on the 7th of October, 1833, and the successive classes, at each term thereafter, are herein set forth, but the records of the school do not show who were actually graduated until within the last three years.

In the year 1835, the Law School was incorporated with the Cincinnati College, a literary and academic institution founded in the year 1819; and from that time it has been conducted as a department of that institution, under the name of the "Law School of the Cincinnati College." As such it became permanently located in the College Buildings, on Walnut street, in Cincinnati, and has been liberally endowed from the College funds for the establishment of professorships, and for the gradual formation of a law library adequate to the purposes of the school.

The organization of the School, the course of study, the requirements for obtaining degrees, and other particulars of interest to those who are contemplating the study of law, will be found in the foregoing pages.

Senior Class,	81
Total,	127

Admission.

The Term commences punctually on the Thursday next after the second Tuesday* of October in each year, and continues until the second Wednesday of the ensuing May. The week from December 24th, to January 2d, both days inclusive, is vacation. During the remainder of the year, a course of study is prescribed for the Junior Class, and for such of the Senior Class as shall pursue the post graduate course. Candidates for graduation must register their names with the Dean of the Faculty, before the first day of November, and must be in daily attendance on the exercises of the College thereafter.

Students may enter subsequently to the first day of November, on payment of a proportionate part of the fees, but they cannot be graduated. Those who desire to attend the Lectures of one or more of the Professors, without attending the full course, can do so. The fees in that case will be reduced as may be agreed. This plan is not recommended, because it necessarily omits important topics.

Candidates for admission will register their names, and pay their fees to the Dean, at the College, on the three days next before the commencement of the term.

No particular course of previous study, either academical or legal, nor any examination, license to practice, or certificate of age, is required for admission to the Junior Class. For admission to the Senior Class, a satisfactory examination in the course prescribed for the Junior Class, or its equivalent, will be required. The regular examination for this purpose will be held during the first three days of each term. The certificate of an attorney at law, in good standing, showing that the applicant has diligently studied law, for one year previous, under his tuition, will also be required from those who have not taken the first year's course in this school.

Expenses.

The tuition fee, for the first term which the student attends, is sixty dollars, in advance; for the second term, thirty dollars, in advance. The fees are to be paid on registering the name. An additional fee of five dollars is charged as a graduation fee, to all who take a degree. The College makes no other charges, nor is there any other expense, by law or custom, imposed on the student.

The text books cost, in Cincinnati, about forty dollars; in some years, a trifle less; in some a trifle more. The other expenses vary, according to the habits or mode of life of each student. The following is an approximate statement. The lower figures do not, of course, afford luxury.

Rent and care of room, $2.00 to $4.00 per week	$52.00	$104 00
Board, $3.25 to $6.00	84.00	156.00
Fuel and Lights	10.00	20 00
	$146.50	$280.00

Course of Study.

The organization of the School has been changed by dividing it into two classes, Junior and Senior; each having the separate course of study and text books designated for it, which follow:

JUNIOR YEAR—Institutes and Elementary Law; Contracts; Law of Real Property. The text books are Blackstone's Commentaries, Kent's Commentaries; Smith on Contracts.

SENIOR YEAR.—Pleading and Civil Procedure; Mercantile Law; Evidence; Equity Jurisprudence; Torts; Law of Real Property; Criminal Law; Wills and Administration. The text books are Stephen on Pleading; the Code of Civil Procedure; Parsons on Contracts; Greenleaf on Evidence; Smith's Manual of Equity; Bigelow on Torts; Williams on Real Property; Harris' Elements of Criminal Law; Redfield on Wills.

POST GRADUATE YEAR.—A third years' course will be added whenever a class of sufficient number can be organized, and communications on this subject are invited. It will be open to Graduates of this or other Law Schools, and the course will consist of the higher branches of the Law Merchant, Equity Jurisprudence, Admiralty Law the Law of Corporations and Conflict of Laws.

No special instruction is given in the legislation of any State, but the statutes of Ohio are referred to, when they change the rules of the common law, or the ordinary doctrines of equity.

On the first four days of the term, the Professors will give an outline of the course of study. The lectures will commence on the first Monday of the term, and thereafter the classes will be regularly and daily examined upon the reading prescribed, and upon the Lectures. The student is expected to read, after the Lecture, in the books or cases which the Lecturer directs, and to be ready, by the next examination, to apply his knowledge to any hypothetical case the examiner may put to him. His attainments are thus put to an immediate trial, and his misapprehensions and difficulties removed before they have had time to become real impediments. At the close of each lecture or examination, the students are expected to ask any questions of the Professor that may occur to them, in connection with the topics discussed.

The regular course of study occupies a period of nineteen months, including two terms of seven months each, and a recess of five months between the terms. The topics are so divided that students may enter the College in either year; and by attending two terms have the advantage of the whole course; or, upon being prepared to pass a satisfactory examination on the topics of the junior year, may enter the senior class, as candidates for graduation, at the close of the term at which they enter. Students who have not had the advantage of systematic instruction and examination in a law office, are in general inadequately prepared to enter the senior class. Where the additional expense is not a controlling consideration, that course is not recommended, and none will be admitted as candidates for graduation, after the first day of November, in any case.

Students who have not pursued any preparatory studies, and whose means do not allowed them to attend two years, frequently desire the advice of the Faculty as to the most profitable time to attend the College; whether at the beginning of their studies; or after they had a year or two of preparation. If the student is under age, has had the advantage of a collegiate training, is residing where courts are held, and is in the office of a practicing lawyer, who directs his studies and examines him in his reading from week to week, it will probably be the wiser plan to pursue, there, the preparatory studies prescribed. If he has no one to direct his first studies and remove the impediments which all beginners in law studies must encounter, it is more advisable to enter the College for the sake of getting a definite outline of a course of education. Much more time and labor will be lost in beginning and continuing his studies without the guidance indicated above, than will compensate for his drawback. Students who attend two terms in the Law School, are in general found to be incomparably better prepared than those who have only attended at the close of their preparatory studies.

Prizes.

Julius Dexter, Esq., one of the Trustees of the College, has provided funds for the following Prizes, to be awarded to the graduating Class at the close of the term:

Two prizes of seventy-five dollars each to those who shall pass the best oral examination; and a prize of seventy-five dollars for the best essay on "The doctrine of Ultra Vires: under what circumstances and in whose favor it is applicable."

An additional prize of twenty-five dollars will be given either for the best examination, or the best essay, as the Committee shall determine.

The awards are to be made by the Committee of the Bar, appointed by the District Court to examine candidates for admission to the Bar.

Libraries.

A LIBRARY of over sixteen hundred volumes, of the best writers on law and jurisprudence, and the more important reports, is connected with the school. It has been selected with special reference to the wants of the school, and is devoted to its exclusive use. Large additions will be made to it annually, a yearly appropriation of $1500 for that purpose being provided by the Corporation, and it is open to the students daily from 9 o'clock A. M., to 10 o'clock P. M.

Students of the Senior Class will also have access, without charge, to the Law Library of the Cincinnati Bar. Those who do not attend the full course of all the Professors, will be charged three dollars each for a certificate of admission to the Library. This library, which is one of the largest and best in the country, having been selected with a view to the actual demands of practice, is particularly well adapted to the wants of advanced students about to come to the Bar.

It contains all the American, English, Irish, Canadian, and Nova Scotian Reports, and a large collection of American and English Statutes, besides the standard text books. Considerable additions are annually made to it, as new works are published.

By the rules of the University of Cincinnati, students in this school may take special studies in the University, free of charge, if found, on examination, qualified to enter such classes.

Students who are non-residents, have by the courtesy of the Directors of the Public Library, of Cincinnati, the use of the Library, and are admitted to the Reading Rooms without charge.

Very valuable advantages are thus open to those who have time for pursuing any branch of literary, or scientific culture, in connection with the study of the law.

Moot Courts,

Will be held each week, except during the first three weeks of the session.

Degrees.

CANDIDATES for graduation are required either to have attended the full course of lectures of all the Professors, at two terms in this College; or to have attended at one term, and to have studied a year previous to entering upon the term at which they offer themselves for graduation, and must be prepared for an examination on all the studies prescribed for the preceding year, or studies of equivalent works. Gentlemen who have attended the terms of other Law Colleges, or who have been admitted to the Bar, upon examination, are put upon the same footing as to examination for degrees, as those who have attended one term at this. Students thus qualified, and whose attendance and conduct has been unexceptionable, will be examined, in writing, by the Faculty at the close of the term. If the examination is satisfactory, they will be presented to the committee appointed by the District Court of Hamilton County, for final examination, as candidates for the Bar. If that committee report them qualified for practice, the Corporation will confer the degree of Bachelor of Laws upon them, and those who are residents of this State, will be immediately admitted to the Bar. No one who has matriculated after the first day of November, or who has not been regular in his attendance, or who has been rejected by the committee, can be graduated. This examination is a real one, and no degrees are granted by this College without it. Graduates must attend in person to receive their degrees, which are conferred on the last day of the term.

The law of Ohio, April 7, 1856, 1 Swan & Critchfield, 94, provides that graduates of Law Colleges in Ohio, having the other legal qualifications, as to age, citizenship, residence, and character, are to be admitted to practice law, without the probation of two years' study required by the law of 1824.

Advisory.

In reply to inquiries so frequently made of Members of the Faculty, as to the expediency of attending law lectures, and the amount of reading required to graduate at this College, the following suggestions are made.

Questions of this kind, depending as they do on an intimate knowledge of the student's natural abilities, his previous training and habits of study, and the advantages he may have been able to command at home in the furtherance of his studies, are not easily answered. It can only be suggested that if the student is in the office of a competent instructor, who directs what he shall read, who stimulates his industry, and quickens his perception by thorough examinations, who is ready to explain all his difficulties, who requires him intelligently to prepare all the steps of an actual litigation, if he has access to a well selected library, and is told how he can advantageously use it, if he has opportunities of seeing how the legal business of a large commercial city is carried on in the Courts, a Law School will have few, if any, advantages to offer him. To those who can not command such advantages, it is conceived that a Law School offers many and great advantages. Lectures, diligent study of the text and a sharp examination, quicken the perceptions, give force and momentum to the thinking faculties, keep the attention alive, both in reading and in hearing, afford immediate scope for practical applications, and produce deeper and more accurate impressions than solitary reading.

The daily misapprehensions which students fall into by misapplying isolated passages in the text-books, must be immediately dissipated when a competent lecturer explains or examines upon the subject. To be trained to the habit of accurate listening, is invaluable to an advocate, one of the chief duties of whose life is to examine witnesses, and report their disjointed stories immediately and accurately to the jury, and merely listening to the questions and mistakes of others, is instructive. Great advantage, too, is believed to be derived from the location of such schools in large cities, where the practical workings of the Courts can be witnessed by the student, and the constant instruction of practicing lawyers can be secured.

It is impossible to answer the question as to graduation. Students reading alone, or in offices, where they are seldom examined, have so little opportunity of measuring their real attainments, that they often mistake the time spent in reading, or the number of volumes read, for a knowledge of law. No rule of law is learned until the student can put it into practice. The students of the Law School are, for example, constantly examined by the facts of the case being stated to them, and an immediate decision required, with the reasons for it, and a reference to the passage of the text-book on which they rely; and they bring their books to the lecture room for that purpose. The only true theory of a legal education, the lecturer assumes, is that which involves a practical training for the duties of the profession, by the learner being taught to put into actual use the doctrines of law in their application to the usual transactions of business.

The test required upon the final examination is fitness, intellectually, for admission to the Bar; and the Committees appointed by the Court to conduct the examination, are not disposed to lower the standard. A student of fair abilities and education, who has devoted the required time to serious study in the books above indicated, understanding what he reads, before attending the lectures, ought to be able to graduate. Whether he can, depends on himself.

☞ Communications concerning the Law School should be addressed to RUFUS KING, Dean, No. 82 West Third street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Lecture Room and Library are in the Cincinnati College Building, Walnut street, between Fourth and Fifth streets.
